Hey Kiddo is a graphic memoir by Jarrett Krosoczka that chronicles his childhood experiences with abuse and neglect. The book is a powerful and moving account of how Krosoczka overcame his trauma and found redemption through art.

Krosoczka's story begins in a small town in Massachusetts, where he was raised by his father and stepmother. His father was an alcoholic and abusive, and his stepmother was neglectful. Krosoczka was often left alone to fend for himself, and he was frequently subjected to physical and emotional abuse.

Despite the challenges he faced, Krosoczka found solace in art. He began drawing at a young age, and his drawings provided him with a way to escape from his reality. Art also helped Krosoczka to process his emotions and to make sense of his experiences.

As Krosoczka grew older, he began to realize that he was not alone in his experiences. He met other children who had also been abused and neglected, and he learned that there was help available.

Krosoczka eventually sought therapy, and he began to work through his trauma. He also found support from his friends and family, and he began to rebuild his life.

Hey Kiddo is a powerful and moving account of Krosoczka's journey from childhood trauma to redemption. The book is a testament to the power of art and the resilience of the human spirit.
